

Please keep the ownership restrictions at their current levels. Isn't the mandate of the FCC to encourage a level and fair playing field for all producers, large and small? Allowing corporations to own a majority share of ownership in the newspaper/broadcast media would have a stifling influence on smaller media outlets, and serves to benefit only the largest of corporations who already have a significant stake in the media. They tend to produce mainstream, middle-of-the-road content rather than the more interesting things produced by smaller, niche organisations. Thanks.
